

Christians have worshipped God in Ladbroke for more than 1000 years.

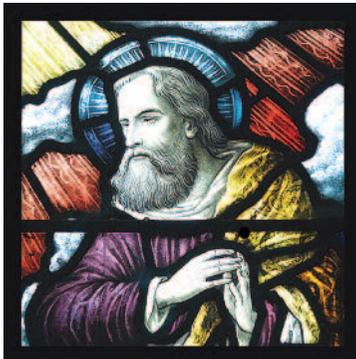

Today, we invite people of all faiths or none to join us at one of our services, come inside to pray, contemplate or explore this fascinating place.

This leaflet points out the highlights, for more information see ladbrokechurch.org.uk

Ladbroke church is over 700 years old. Its unusual striped tower is made from local White Lias and iron-rich Hornton stone.

The interior was transformed in 1876 by the famous Victorian architect, Sir George Gilbert Scott, better known for the front of St Pancras Station, London.

The windows have wonderful stained glass from many different studios.

A warm welcome to All Saints Ladbroke, a church that is steeped in history and is at the heart of this rural community. Faithful Christian people have gathered, worshipped, celebrated and served God here for centuries and these walls echo with their prayers.

The church is much more than history, architecture and tradition. It is made up of people who embody and apply God's love and hope to the local community and the wider world. If you have something or someone that you would like us to pray for, please let us know.

May you be blessed by your visit here and be refreshed when you leave.

LADBROKE CHURCH

Ladbroke Church Highlights at a glance

War memorial lists names and regiments of those who died or returned plus the statistics of war, "Lest ye forget"

Monuments are worth reading, many extol the virtues of good women

Good Shepherd banner beautifully restored by STRADFAS shows Jesus, with a cross in his halo, carrying one of his flock

Wooden carving throughout is 'all of a piece' but if you look carefully the pew carvings have subtly different designs

Organ made by Hill and Sons, London, cost £527 9s 6d in 1876

East window is full of amazing details. Can you find Noah among the 90 or so saints and biblical characters?

Errington window, with St Wilfred and the choristers at Ripon, still inspires choirs today

Eagle lectern given to Rev Errington by his Derbyshire colleagues

Statue of priest found under the floor by the Victorians, now in its own alcove

Old roof line before it was raised in 15th century

Porch heads from a farmhouse (originally the church) in the nearby lost village of Radbourne
